said of his involvement in this and other schemes. For his own part, he said he blamed personal ambition, arms industry norms and his being "maybe a little crazy."

General Dynamics officials have continually maintained that the Veliotis allegations are false and self-serving. But as investigators from the U.S. government and the press have gradually obtained independent confirmation of some of his charges, the company has become more defensive.

Of the records that Mr. Veliotis keeps in an Athens bank vault, the telephone tapes have proved the most dramatic, if not yet the most damaging to General Dynamics. Mr. Veliotis said he had given 90 percent of his surreptitious recordngs to the Justice Department and 60 percent to a reporter for The Washington Post who is writing a book about the company.

He said he had kept about five hours of taped business conversations that he feels are severely damaging to top General Dynamics executives and government officials. He will release these tapes, he said, if the Justice Department "doesn't play it straight."

His lawyers have also been in-structed, he added, to release them upon his death. He said three attempts have been made to kill him since his ream to Greece The layish Ekali residence was built with security in mind — it has bulletproof windows and extensive alarm stems, and is just down the hill from the home of Constantine Caramanlis, a family friend and former president of Greece.

For a year, Justice Department investigators have made repeated visits to Athens to question Mr. Veliotis and decipher his tapes. Early on, the department granted him immunity against charges in a single area - possibly fraudulent filing of claims to recover huge cost overruns on navy submarine contracts in the 1970s. Gorbacher Calls For Missile Halt

The Associated Press MOSCOW - Mikhail S Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, urged NATO on Friday to halt Pershing-2 and cruise missile deployments in Europe to pave the way for agreement at the Geneva arms talks. In return, he said the Kremlin could freeze Soviet countermeasures.

The report by the official Soviet press agency Tass on Mr. Gorbachev's remarks to a delegation of visiting Socialists contained his most detailed comments on arms control since he became Communist Party general secretary March 11.

Mr. Gorbachev told the Sorialists, "We are convinced that the termination of new American missile deployments in Europe with a simultaneous end to the buildup of Soviet countermeasures would be most helpful to solving the entire complex of questions under discussion in Geneva." He did not specify the countermeasures to which be

Writers Assert Turkey Uses Torture

ISTANBUL (AP) — Two playwrights, Arthur Miller of the United States and Harold Pinter of Britain, ended a five-day investigation Friday of the human rights situation in Turkey and denounced what they called

"gross violations of human spirit through physical torture."

The men said they concluded that torture, in spite of official denials, is systematic and widely used in Turkish police stations and military prisons. They also said they would urge their governments to take action.

Mr. Miller, president of the international writers' association, PEN, and Mr. Einter a magniture of DEN, considered a vicit to supersyconditions. and Mr. Pinter, a member of PEN, concluded a visit to survey conditions and difficulties of journalists, writers and academicians under martial law rule. Martial law is in force in 23 of Turkey's 67 provinces, including in the city of Istanbul and the capital of Ankara.

Neves Recovering; Party Asks Delay BRASILIA (AP) — The political party of Tancredo Neves asked

Brazil's Congress on Friday for an extension of the deadline for the swearing in of the president-elect, who had surgery on the day he was to have been inaugurated. The request did not require formal approval by the Congress.

Surgeons said Friday that Mr. Neves, 75, was doing "very well" after an intestinal operation Wednesday, his second in less than a week. The said he should be able to leave the hospital by the end of the month. The first operation was March 15.

Vice President José Sarney, 54, has been serving as acting preside. The normal constitutional deadline for Mr. Neves's swearing in is Mc. day, barring externating circumstances. In a letter delivered Friday Congress, the Brazilian Democratic Movement called Mr. Neves's st gery an "extenuating circumstance."

The Middle West As a Shifting Ideal

For Americans, the Middle West is the traditional source of the country's food and values, less a specific place than an idea that conjures up images of farms, small towns and friendly people, notes James R. Shortridge, a prolessor of geography at the University of Kansas. And as the reality of these images moves farther west, he says, so do ideas of where this region is.

Since the turn of the century the Midwest usually has been de-scribed as the 12 states from Ohio west through Kansas and north to the Canadian border. But, according to a survey by Mr. Shortridge, the Middle West today is a much smaller region that for most people includes only Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas and South Dakota, though the fringes shift according to inindustrial centers like Detroit and Cleveland no longer fit the perception of the peaceful, friendly agricultural heartland, and Chicago, once its capital, is no longer considered so by a majority of the 1,941 students polled in 32 states. Mr. Shortridge concluded that the industrial states east of the Mississippi once considered part of the Middle West are now "a region in need of a name."

Mr. Reagan said he knew the strategic defense initiative, popularly known as "star wars," had the endorsement of Prime Minister Margaret

Mr. Reagan said the United States would do "whatever we could to bring the warring parties together." He said that he was willing to meet with a group of Palestinians and Jordanians to discuss peace, but "at the moment" not with the Palestine Liberation Organization because "we have not had any statement from them that they recognize Israel or the United Nations esolutions" that call for the return of Israeli-occupied territory in exchange for recognition of the right of all states in the area to exist within secure borders.

 On the killings Thursday of at least 18 blacks in South Africa, Mr. Reagan appeared to blame both sides. He termed the violence "tragic," but said it was "significant" that some of the security forces "enforcing the law and using the guns were also black — black po-licemen." To assert "that the violence was coming totally from the law-and-order side ignores the fact that there was noting going on on behalf of others there," Mr. Reagan said. Reagan Seeks Compromise With Senate

On Budget By Gerald M. Boyd

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan has expressed willmgness to discuss a compromise with Senate Republican leaders on his 1986 budget, but he has rejected any reduction in his proposal for military spending.

Mr. Reagan and Senate Republicans met Friday but were unable to resolve the question of military spending. United Press Interna-tional reported. It said agreement was reached to form a smaller "working group" for further talks.]

"We recognize that others may have other ideas." Mr. Reagan said at a news conference Thursday.

"But now they've got something that we can sit down and talk

At an earlier meeting between senior Senate Republicans and White House aides, Pete V. Dome-nici of New Mexico, the Budget Committee chairman, warned that the committee's package was "the best you're going to get." That package reduces Mr. Reagan's re-quested military appropriation by $12 billion.

In discussing the budget, Mr. Reagan appeared to begin on a conciliatory note, but his posture stiffened as he was asked about specific areas of possible compromise with Senate Republicans. At one point, he adamantly rejected the Senate Budget Committee's proposed reduction in his military budget.

"Any further cuts are actually going to run the risk of lowering our capability of preserving national security," Mr. Reagan said. The president complained that members of Congress who advocated reduced military spending were attempting to use the money for domestic programs, and he said this was not acceptable to him. Mr. Reagan also said he would not try to punish any of the 22

Republican senators up for re-election in 1986 if they did not support his budget proposals, as he had been reported to be planning to do. The president said the "11th Commandment" of his party was: Thou shalt not speak ill of another

Precludes Visit to Nazi Camp

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan says he decided not to visit the site of a Nazi concentration camp during his trip to Europe next month because he wants to focus on peace rather than the past. Speaking at his press conference Thursday, Mr. Reagan also said that he believed that West Germany's present sense of guilt for the killings of millions of Jews in World War II, had "been imposed upon them, and I just think it's unnecessary."

Mr. Reagan will be in Europe for ceremonies to mark the 40th nniversary of the war's end, and some Jewish groups had suggested that he visit the concentration camp at Dachau, north of Munich. Mr. Reagan said he felt strongly that "we should observe this day as the day when 40 years ago peace began," rather than by reviving memories of the war.

He said that he had discussed the visit with the West German chancellor, Helmut Kohl, who, he said, "felt the same way, that we could observe this as the beginning of peace and friendship between

"They have a feeling, a guilt feeling that's been imposed upon them, and I just think it's unnecessary," Mr. Reagan said of the West Germans. "I think they should be recognized for the democracy that they've created and the democratic principles they now esponse." In an aside, Mr. Reagan suggested that among the German population, there were "very few alive that remember even the war, and certainly none of them who were adults and participating in any way." In fact, however, many Nazi war veterans are still alive. Mr. Kohl was 15 when the war ended. The chief West German government spokesman, Peter Boenisch praised President Reagan's comments Friday, calling them "the words of a friend," The Associated Press reported from Bonn.

["We were pleased," Mr. Boenisch said. "We have repeatedly said that the anniversary of the German capitulation must not remind us only of the horror and the crimes of the past. It should also be a reminder of what we have achieved in the past 40 years."]

Mr. Reagan is scheduled to mark May 8, or V-E Day, the 40th anniversary of the official end of the war in Europe, with a speech to the European Parliament in Strasbourg. He is also scheduled to visit Spain and Portugal while in Europe.

U.S. Report Finds Americans' Health Is Improving

WASHINGTON - The health of Americans continues to improve by almost every measure, the government reported Friday. But health professionals say there are some disquieting exceptions to the trend.

The Department of Health and Human Services, in an annual report on the health of the American people, said that both men and women are living longer, healthier lives. Infant mortality continues to decline though at a slower pace. Life expectancy is up. Deaths from heart attack and strokes are declining. And people are changing their liv-ing habits in ways that should bring improvement and longer lives.

 Americans who reached their 65th birthday in 1983 could expect to live another 16.8 years. In 1970, that figure was 15.2 years. • Infant mortality dropped to 10.9 deaths per 1,000 live births in 1983, a decline from 11.2 in 1982 and from 16.1 in 1975.

• More people see doctors — 74.5 percent within the last year, compared with 66 percent in 1964. The increase has come primarily among lower-income groups.

But the report also contained some disquieting statistics. For example, while cigarette smoking has declined among American men to the point that the number of ex-smokers is beginning to rival the number of current smokers, the same is not true for women. The study said that 34.8 percent of Ameri-

24. In that age group, the study said, smoking increased from 32.7 percent in 1980 to 36.1 percent in 1983. At the same time, the report noted, the death rate from lung cancer among women is climbing. In 1981, the report said, lung cancer deaths among women surpassed deaths from breast cancer for one age group and matched

one great question was the use to which the oilexporting countries would put their new wealth. Iraq and Iran have used it to pursue for four and a half years an immensely bloody war. For some time the war has been deadlocked along a line very close to the prewar boundary. Periodically one side or the other attempts to break the deadlock, and the level of lighting suddenly rises.

That is happening again this month, but this attempt differs from most of its predecessors. This time, in violation of an agreement worked out last June by the United Nations, both sides are going after civilian targets. Neither has sufficient air power to make a decisive difference in the military balance. Both have apparently decided to use their planes instead to increase the sense of war-weariness and fear among civilians in the hope of generating pres-sure for a negotiated settlement. A series of explosions in Baghdad suggests that Iran may be using missiles against its enemy's capital. Neither side seems likely to win a conventional military victory. Both are better equipped for defense than for offensive operations, which is why the casualties have been so high. Both sides, but particularly the Iranians with their much larger numbers, have relied heavily on tactics reminiscent of World

When the price of oil soared in the 1970s, War I, with massed infantry attacks into fire from entrenched machine guns.

The United States and the Soviet Union came some time ago to a tacit agreement that Iraq cannot be allowed to lose. Each superpower has its obvious reasons for wishing to avoid the surge of aggressive Moslem funda-mentalism that would surely follow an Iranian triumph. Iran has been trying to buy weapons from every possible source from South America to North Korea, but the superpowers have been at work to hold down the flow. They have succeeded - so far - in preventing Iran from breaking the deadlock, but not in ending the fighting. As long as it continues, a break-through by one side or the other remains possible. That was what the Iranian offensive this week was attempting — with very high losses but, apparently, little success. The sticking point remains Ayatoliah Khomeini's insistence that any settlement requires the overthrow of President Saddam Hussein. There recently have been signals suggesting that at least some Iranians are ready to retreat from that condition, although, like all signals from Iran, they are anything but clear. For the rest of the world a stalemate remains the best military outcome, since that alone seems likely to lead to serious peace negotiations.

A Chore for Mexico

The United States is rightly alarmed by evidence that drug traffickers are corrupting Mexico's law enforcement. Why are Mexican officials so reluctant to share that alarm?

A decade ago Mexico was the main source of marijuana and heroin consumed in the United States. Commendably, it responded to U.S. pressure and help with an effective croperadication program. By 1981 Mexico's share of marijuana shipments to the United States had fallen to 4 percent. Its heroin share was down to 33 percent by 1983. But now Mexico's marijuana shipments have rebounded to 24 percent, while heroin shipments have crept back up to 37 percent. The reversal coincides with disturbing signs of official indifference.

Last November Mexican authorities seized 2,500 tons of marijuana produced on a farm employing 6,000 peasants. How could that immense business operate without official complicity? This month the authorities were suspiciously slow to investigate the minder of a U.S. drug enforcement agent. Under heavy pressure from Washington they finally arrested several police officers. "It's hard to tell the good guys from the bad guys here," reported one U.S. agent, "They all carry badges." What can the United States do? Some in Washington are enraged to the point of demanding an end to help from the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank, which last year lent Mexico more than $800 million. But that would further limit Washington's influence and penalize U.S. businesses in Mexico. Besides, the Mexicans have a point when they say that the problem begins with the demand for drugs in the United States.

But in their terms it is risky to dismiss the issue so casually. Colombia, Pakistan, Thailand and Malaysia once considered drug production for execut a relatively hardless estividuction for export a relatively harmless activity; all now find themselves having to cope with large and growing addict populations. The Mexican economy is already infected, as Mexico's drug traffickers have invested their millions in real estate and other legitimate businesses. Unchecked, their bribing and bullying of officials is sure to continue.

Does a country so dependent on U.S. tourists really want a reputation for addiction, corruption and violence? Is its legitimate economy so weak that it must settle for an economy rooted in crime? Why does a government properly proud of its standing in the hemisphere let itself be pushed around by thugs? Pride should dictate Mexico's cooperation with drug enforcement. So should self-interest.

Good Talks in Quebec

When the president of the United States and the Canadian prime minister can agree, they usually have the satisfaction of having done something tangible for a lot of people. A boring serenity along a border, leaving countries' energies free for more productive preoccupations, is the reward of good diplomacy. The Quebec conversations this week between Ronald Reagan and Brian Mulroney were warm and at least modestly productive.

The agreement on acid rain is likely to prove more useful than it might look at first glance. A lot of Canadians have needled Mr. Mulroney for settling for a mere study. True, it is unfair that the wind blows smoke mostly from the United States to Canada and not vice versa. But the United States has reduced emissions of sulfur dioxide, the most threatening of the pollutants, by a third since the mid-1970s. Canadians, meanwhile, have done very little to control their own prolific sources of acid rain. Canada would be in a stronger position to call for further action in the United States if it began to tighten up the loose controls on its own power plants and, especially, its smelters. Mr. Mulroney understands this point. With a little luck, the joint study will lead to a joint countries' lakes, forests and people. The most sensitive subject in the Quebec conversations was defense, and Canada's fears — exacerbated by a careless remark by Secre-tary of Defense Caspar Weinberger —of being overrun by U.S. strategic planners.

But the more important subject was trade and money. Here the president and the prime minister did less than they might have done. Earlier the two countries were talking about a free trade zone between them. But in Quebec nobody seemed anxious to pursue such a radical thought. Instead they proposed still another joint effort, this one to reduce tariffs and other trade barriers. This joint effort seems likely to produce less than it promises. The reality is that under Mr. Mulroney Canada is again opening its economy to the foreign investment that it needs. And under Mr. Reagan the United States is becoming more dependent on Canadian energy - electricity in the East, natural gas in the West. These bonds of mutual advantage and dependence created the cordial atmosphere in which the two men met on Sunday and Monday.

Drug Runners Stop at the Bank

It has become increasingly evident that banks and other financial houses often are unwitting, and sometimes witting, handmaidens of drug samgglers. They "launder" huge amounts of dirty money by passing it through clean hands, thus making illicit drug-trade profits look legitimate. Law enforcement officials recently said they believe that $1.2 billion transferred through the Bank of Boston was tied to drug trafficking. The bank was fined $500,000 for failing to report the transactions.

Prosecutors want tougher laws to help them crack down on money laundering. Illegal U.S. drug trafficking is estimated to generate as much as $80 billion in cash a year. If bankers don't cooperate better with law enforcement in following the Mafia's money flow, they may fall under some tough new laws, which they will entirely deserve.

1910: Hatpin Wielders Must Disarm NEW YORK -- The Chicago ordinance which deprives women of long harpins, their most cherished weapon of defense, became law [on March 21] amid a tempest of hissing from the fair sex which crowded the galleries of the Chicago City Hall. By a vote of 68 to 2, the Council, after considering the proposed ordi-nance for a month, decreed: "No person while in a public street or public elevator or other public place shall wear any hatpin the exposed point of which shall protrude more than one half of an inch beyond the hat in, upon or through which such pin is worn." After the ordinance passed, many women indignantly proclaimed their intention of carrying a long hatpin in their hands as a weapon. The ordinance has aroused widespread interest.

1935: Travel to the Moon and Back? PARIS - Scientists have proved wrong so often as to what might be possible or impossible in the future that one hesitates to pronounce on the possibility of transport between the earth and the moon. The problem is engaging the attention of engineering and aeronanti-cal experts. Granted that the problems of propulsion will be solved and that somebody will get to the moon eventually, the question of getting back remains. Given a sufficient supply of rockets, it is conceivable that the "moon flyer" will have enough propulsive power for the return journey. But what if he misses the earth? He would then be travelling in space forever. The first moon "tripper" would have

Moscow's Afghan Line May Be Hardening

WASHINGTON — The experts in Washington are not sure ex-actly what General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev had in mind when he told Pakistan's President Zia ul-Haq at the Chernenko funeral that continued collaboration with the rebels in Afghanistan would affect Soviet-Pakistani relations in "the most negative way." But when the Soviet agency Tass is at pains to report such blunt language, American authorities take the matter seriously.

One theory is that Mr. Gorbachev was currying favor with his military as part of the process of consolidating power. The military's frustrations with an ugly struggle that has lasted longer for the Soviets than World War II are predictably acute.

But that theory makes sense only if Mr. Gorbachev means business more resources allocated to the Afghan war effort, stepped up cross-border "hot pursuit" of Afghan re-bels into Pakistan at the expense of Pakistani civilians, or subtler, subversive pressures on Pakistan. Whatever the case, the conclusion here is that Afghanistan is increasingly a highpriority Soviet concern.

And that makes Afghanistan and Pakistan — an increasing con-cern for U.S. policymakers as well. Washington is a heavy supplier of military aid to the Zia government, by way of stiffening its resolve as a co-conspirator in the CIA's "covert" supply of arms to Afghan rebels. So Soviet efforts to intimidate the Pakistanis are at odds with U.S. policy.

The conflict of U.S.-Soviet interests is comparated by the U.S. Com-

ests is compounded by the U.S. Congress, which is even more eager than the Reagan administration, and a lot more explicit, in its dedication to the cause of the Afghan "freedom fight-ers." By doubling the administra-tion's $100-million request for aid to the rebels and passing a resolution for more effective U.S. support, Con-gress has made Pakistan all the more uncomfortable with its role as the overland route for aid to the rebels.

Not that the Soviets would not be admonishing Pakistan in any case. Most of the costs of the war to the Soviets are obvious: the casualties, the weapons destroyed, the strain on Soviet resources, the open-endedness of it all. But one cost has gone largely unnoted, except by U.S. authorities who monitor such matters: the demoralizing effect the war is beginning

The reason is that even in a closed society, the wounds of war —or more precisely, the wounded — can no longer be concealed or explained away. PARIS — François Mitterrand means to leave his mark on France. Three immense public works have been launched under his presidency, each of them expressions of his personal taste. He risks, however, leaving a larger, immaterial monu-ment because of what he does or does not do to alter the political character of the Fifth Republic. His material monuments, if they are completed, will be three.

A new opera house at the Place de la Bastille in Paris will allow the existing Palais Garnier, marvelous but impractical product of the Second Empire, to become a theater of ballet. The Louvre museum is to expand into a whole wing of its building until now occupied by the Finance Ministry. It will be given vast new underground facilities crowned by the famous (some say infamous) glass pyramid by I.M. Pei, to be erected over a new entrance in the central court. Finally, at the skyscraper business center called La Défense, just to the west of the city, a building in the form of an arch - two great towers with a bridge - will complete the noble perspective that now sweeps from the Louvre and the small Arc de Triomphe in the Carrousel garden, past the Place de la Concorde, up the Champs-Elysées to the great Arc de Triomphe and on to La Défense. Mr. Mitterrand's predecessors, Valéry Giscard d'Estaing and Georges Pompidou, lest museums - an as yet unfinished museum of 19th century art in Giscard's case, and the enormously popular museum of modern art that bears the Pompidou name.

The Fifth Repub-lic's constitution created a kind of elected absolutism, by which for seven years a president with vast powers consults but is not ruled by Parliament. Each year sees his conduct im-plicitly plebiscited by regional or local elections, and each five years by a parliamentary election.

This constitution has since 1958 given France an enviable stability and continuity of direction. Essential to that stability has been the electoral method, that of winner-take-all, as in Britain and the United States.

It is this which now is in question. Local elections just concluded have shown the governing Socialist Party of Mr. Mitterrand somewhat improved over its recent electoral performances, and still by far the largest party in the country, but with practically no prospect of winning, by itself, the parliamentary election that will take place a year from now.

On the other hand, a new party

This kind of nonsense coming from a normally well informed and sympathetic writer is typical of the distressful exaggeration about Africa's condition that appears in Western media, possibly due to the media's failure to report the positive as well as the negative sides of the African condition.

Moscow Notebook: Recalling Brezhnev and His 'Coachman' By Seth Mydans New York Times Service

MOSCOW - He is said in Moscow gossip to have started his career as Leo-nid I. Brezhnev's chauffeur, and during his brief tenure as the leader of the Soviet Union some people referred to him dismissingly as "the coachman."

At his funeral last week, all eyes were on his forceful, younger successor, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 54, running the ceremony briskly through its familiar steps. Now, a week after his burial in Red Square, Konstantin U. Chernenko is already fading quickly from memory here. The forlorn impression he leaves behind is of a small 73-year-old man, visibly sick and inadequate to the job, appointed for political reasons by men more powerful than he, run through the paces of leader-ship even when he seemed too weak to stand up on his own and buried hurriedly when he died so that his colleagues could get on with their business.

Mr. Chemenko rose through Communist Party ranks primarily on the basis of his close friendship with Brezhnev, and when he was appointed to the Politburo in 1978, the move was seen in large part as the gesture of one pal to another in an administration accustomed to cronyism.

By the time he became the Soviet Union's supreme leader in February 1984, 15 months after Brezhnev's death.

His appointment seemed clearly to be a hard-nosed compromise among competing Kremlin factions, and as his health quickly deteriorated, Soviet offi-cials discussed his illness more openly and with less sense of decorum than they had with previous leaders.

To show that he was alive during his long absences from public view, Mr. Chemenko was given what seemed insultingly insignificant statements to sign, ed to a Canadian schoolgirl or a group of Western churchmen.

In his last days, when he was roused from his sickbed to take part in brief, heavily edited television appearances, he stumbled mumbled and nodded complacently as another official waved and grinned at him as if to a small child. Last week, Mr. Chemenko's humanity

. The biennale - this is the 13th - is a departure in several respects. Its budget has been increased tenfold from the last exhibition, to 10 million francs (about $1 million), it has found a permanent and independent base at La Villette and the directors have decided to abolish the age limit: Until now it was open only to artists under 35. All this implies a new concept, and shows the determination of the French officials running such cultural ventures to consolidate the position of Paris on the international art scene, a position that has been questioned in recent years. One official recently declared that the biennale should strive to become the French counterpart of the Documenta exhibitions in Kassel, West Germany -

Theirs is an extraordinary story, as told in the sale catalog by the ex- the week at Drouot, they were by pert for the sale, Jean-Pierre Ca-

In 1923, he relates, Sonia Delaunay did about 50 drawings for "simultaneous fabrics." The phrase in French makes no more sense than it does in English; it would seem to mean essentially that the fabrics were made "en suite," or in a set, as cabinetmakers say, Delaunay did them for a French company in Lyon. Her contribution was purely pictorial, but it gave her the idea of producing fabrics. A year later, she opened a workshop and started turning out fabrics woven to her designs for private patrons as well as theatrical and ballet productions. In May 1924. when a "Bal des Pages" was held for the benefit of former Russian court officers, she contributed costumes on the theme "La Mode à venir" (the fashion to be). Men clad in geometrical costumes on rigid frames pranced around to specially composed music, characterized by Camard as "insolite" (unaccustomed or weird). Women dressed in costumes designed to look like "colored rhythms" were also featured. A poem by the now-forgot-ten Joseph Delteil was recited during intermission.

The designs were then shelved, to be retrieved 60 years later by Camard. Some are working drawings of documentary interest, others, done in gouache, are of greater significance to modern art. See them at the sale preview was like being invited to watch a creative process 60 years ago. The feeling worked wonders as the auction proceeded.

Eventually, no doubt, it will be seen they bid vehemently against each showing women dancing in avantgarde costumes, done for a Dada show organized by Tristan Tzara, brought 61,000 francs.

While these were the most significant discoveries in the first half of no means the only ones, nor, commercially speaking, the most lucra-tive. The top prize — a steep 780,000 francs paid by an unidentified foreign buyer — went to a landscape by Frits Thaulow.

Born in Christiania - now Oslo — in 1847, this painter had an unconventional career that resulted in the most academic type of painting. He was trained at the School of Fine Arts in Christiania and at the Copenhagen Academy. Wearying of his stultifying surroundings, he left for Karlsruhe, Germany, and later to France, where he spent most of the rest of his life, except for numerous trips to Germany. where his work was immensely popular. He had a studio in Dieppe for many years and from there journeyed through the French provinces. The painting offered at Drouot was obviously done in France, possibly in one of the eastern ports of Normandy. The houses with purple brick walls, the steep tiled roofs with a gentle sloping curve at the bottom, are observed with loving care. The expanse of a widening river sending back reflections of a wintry sky as the breeze blows ripples on its surface expresses a genuinely poetic feel for the French countryside. ■ Baudelaire Book Sold

A first edition of "Les Fleurs du mal" by Charles Baudelaire fetched 1.3 million francs (about $130,000) at a sale of 19th-century books Wednesday by the auction house Ader Picard Tajan, Reuters reported from Paris.

The slim red volume of poetry. dedicated on the flylcal to the painter Eugène Delacroix, a close friend of Baudelaire, was bought by Pierre Beres, a Parisian dealer Experts at the sale said the 1857 dedication probably increased the value of the book tenfold.

The sale of 108 books belonging to Jacques Guerin, a private collec-tor, raised more than 12 million francs.

But this collection, which was serious despite the spoofy delivery, was a vast improvement over last season's and should attract more buyers. Mugler's retail sales, according to his business manager, Michel Douard, totaled $4 million last year, 25 percent in the United States. Chinese scholars have for many centuries done their artists a disservice by dismissing all works except paintings, sculptures, ceramics and bronzes as "minor arts." Two years ago the Oriental Department of Spink mounted a collection of the "minor arts." Now, in "The Minor Arts of China II," they have on show 239 works, many of museum

The show is divided into 10 sections, notable among which are 35 enamels and 28 textiles. Among the enamels are 18th-century incense burners — one in the form of a kylin, a mythical Chinese animal, and another shaped like a pair of nesting quail — and a double-gourd-form Pekin enamel vase of the Quianlong period, 1736-1795.

Among the textiles — a Spink specialization not only in the Oriental Department — are a late Ming (c. 1621-1644) blue velvet canopy, embroidered with dragons chasing pearls and clouds, apparently com-posed of yardage originally intended for a court robe; and a group of

N.Y. Stocks Off in Dull Session

United Press International NEW YORK - The stock market wound up lackluster session with a small loss Friday, despite a new report showing inflation remained moderate.

Except for some excitement in a handful of stocks rumored to be takeover candidates, trading was dull, "It seemed like merger mania," said Peter Furniss of Shearson Lehman.

He said institutional investors were in the background and traders were dominant as rumors flowed back and forth on several issues. The Dow Jones industrial average lost 0.77 to ,267.45. For the week, the Dow jumped 20.10. The New York Stock Exchange index shed

0.20 to 103.65 and the price of an average share decreased 6 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.31 to 179.04. Declines topped advances by an 8-7 ratio among the 1,999 issues traded at the closing. Big Board volume totaled 99.25 million shares, up from 95.93 million traded Thursday. Before the stock market opened, the Labor

Department reported Consumer Prices increased 0.3 percent in February, keeping the inflation rate in the 3.5-percent range The report on inflation followed by one day the government estimate that the economy was growing at a 2.1-percent rate in the first quarter market was "just drifting, everyone's saying the only game in town is these takeover deals."

"The market is telling me you have two tiers, with one consisting of blue chips and special situations including takeovers," said Ralph Acampora of Kidder, Peabody. He said the other part of the stock market was the second-ary stocks, which have not done well.

"Taken together," he said, "the market is at best neutral to weak." He expects any rally attempt to be "temporary and non-sustainable" unless the market can show better volume on the upside and better breadth. ITT Corp. was the most active NYSE-listed

issue, up 1% to 35%. The heavy trading came on new rumors that Minneapolis investor Irwin Jacobs wants to see a spin-off of assets such as Sheraton Hotels and Hartford Insurance. ADRIAN ZECHA LINKS A LUXURY CHAIN

drian Zecha looks out of place at New York's Mayfair Regent Hotel. For one g, he's wearing a fisherman's ater. At this bastion of conative elegance, in a cozy saroom where tea and finger lwiches are served every afoon at four o'clock, Zecha is to be the only man not ring a proper coat and tie. For ther thing, he's East Indian. while the Mayfair Regent have its share of Chinese and anese guests, not a lot of East ans pass through the hotel's olving door. Yet Zecha seems at home in this Victorian-style m that one might imagine it to us own living room.

1 a sense, it is exactly that. drian Zecha is, at 52, a globeting veteran deal maker. en years ago he engineered he Mayfair the sort of quiet I that has become his tradek. At a time when the city's els were still feeling the pinch ad times, Zecha put together roup of investors and apached Bill Zeckendorf, Jr., the eloper who himself had ght the old Mayfair House years before. Zeckendorf had alled Sirio Maccioni at the el's elegant Le Cirque restaut, among other things, and put stately old 200-room hotel on long road back to respectity. But there was still so far o, and Zeckendorf had other to fry. For $14.5 million, he I the hotel could be had.

roblem was, Zecha and his tners, Hotel Managers Bob

Burns and Georg Rafael, had only $1.5 million they could squeeze from their Hong Kong-based Regent International Hotels, a private company specializing in hotel management and acquisition. Hurriedly, they put together a $1 million nonrefundable down payment. Then Zecha went looking through his mental list of names. By the time he was through, he had recruited a group of Chicago businessmen-led by Mortgage Banker Norman Perlmutter-to ante up 75% of the price, while he and his partners

To an outsider, that might have seemed a dubious proposition. All that effort for a quarter of the pie? But it was just the sort of proposition Zecha, Burns and Rafael liked. Now they could follow their usual game plan, with Zecha as the front man wheeling off to make another deal, Burns and Rafael stepping in with hotel expertise to oversee the day-today operation and the backers watching their investments appreciate with little or no effort on their part-a strategy of management rather than ownership.

Says Zecha: 'The guy who owns a hotel has two choices. He can run it himself and become a proprietor-owner. But if he is an investor in a property company, he does not want to, because running a hotel is a very specialized business, full of daily management problems. In the U.S. the name of the game in property ownership is not return on investment but real estate appreciation."

Zecha continues to hold a place as one of five directors on the Regent's international board. But the truth is that he sort of floats off on his own these days, serving as chairman of a publicly traded. energy-related trading company he founded in Hong Kong, putting a Regent hotel deal together in San Francisco, talking with bankers in Bangkok about another Regent hotel there, and in general tending to his various interests like some private practitioner of shuttle diplomacy.

The most recent example of Zecha's deal making involves the Park from a Saudi Arabian group for 45 million pounds. Just six months later, though, the hotel was sold again: this time by the Regent group to the Sultan of Brunei for an undisclosed sum. "We couldn't resist his offer," says Zecha. Once again, the Regent group retained a management position. From now until the turn of the century, it will work for the sultan to help assure the hotel's greater success. Already the sultan has tossed out Regent's own renovation budget of six million pounds-which in the main would have paid for air-conditioning to n the beginning, there was breakfast. The original New ▲ Yorkers—good Dutch burghers and enterprising English traders-would never have dreamed of starting a day's work without a hearty breakfast.

In more recent times convenience foods and long commutes pushed real breakfasts right out of many people's lives. Fortunately for egg-starved executives, muffin mavens and other aspiring sybarites of the early morning, in the late 1960s two pioneers of the palate created something that was destined to revolutionize the wav New Yorkers do business: the power breakfast.

The power breakfast was born amid the plush banquettes of Le Restaurant, the dining room at the Regency Hotel Gerald "Jerry" Tsai, Jr., a go-go portfolio manager based in Boston, was the proud father. Larry Tisch, who owns the Regency along with his brother Bob, was the attending physician. At first it was just Jerry and Larry, talking stocks over Danish and coffee in the hotel dining room whenever Jerry, who was busy starting his Manhattan Fund, came into town. But power hitters like Leon Hess of Hess Oil, Colt Industries' David Margolis and Developer Lewis Rudin soon joined in. As the crowds grew, so did the menu, and by the mid-1970s the limos were huddled three-deep along Sixtyfirst Street. Inside, deal makers from the worlds of politics, investment banking and real estate broke brioches together, while the hired guns of the corporate takeover game made mental notes on who was breakfasting with whom.

Still the undisputed leader in terms of Manhattan heavy hitters, the Regency has become a kind of Elaine's for businessmena place to be seen rather than a place to talk. And like its latenight counterpart, the Regency is never going to be famous for its fine food. Keeping in mind, then, that the whole point of a power breakfast is the jump it gives you on the rest of your day, what is a discriminating (and deal-hungry) executive to do? Here are a pair of places—one new, one recently renovated-that offer a chance to combine early morning business and gustatory pleasure without having to worry about what everyone else in the room is saving.

At Le Régence, the restaurant at the Hôtel Plaza Athénée, Decorator Valerian Rybar used wellspaced tables, Wedgwood-blue walls, Haviland-Limoges china and vaulted ceilings playfully festooned with trompe l'oeil. clouds to create an airy, pleasant setting for morning tête-à-têtes.

Though the carpeting is only temporary (the real rugs are still in the Orient) and the three crystal chandeliers have just been installed, Chef Daniel Boulud seems to have the breakfast well in hand. The grapefruit is sufficiently cold and astringent to clear the most jaded palate. The espresso is respectably bitter, but

The palette is expressed on a milk chocolate ground, in which orange, yellow, ivory, tan, taupe, off white, and green dominate. club and swimming pool.

This is the sort of deal making that has made Regent International Hotels, at 15 years old, one of the hottest hotel chains of its kind in the world. Others—Hilton. Hyatt, Marriott, Holiday Inn-are huge by comparison to the Regent's far-flung, 13-hotel fiefdom. But Regent has never gone empire building. From the start, the plan has been to go up against a select few international hotel companies catering exclusively to the luxury market—the Torontobased Four Seasons and the Hong Kong-based Mandarin and Peninsula—and to do it as the Regent did with both the Mayfair and the Dorchester, by having other investors put up the cash and by supplying the management expertise that makes the equation work. The profits may not seem as glamorous at first. but Zecha now can point with pride to the numbers that count: "On a capitalization of $1.5 million ten years ago," he says, "we have put together a total property portfolio in excess of $1 billion," much of which the Regent partners simply manage—but some of which they own in part.

Until its purchase of the Dorchester, the Regent group had stayed away from Europe. It had its 600-room flagship Regent Hotel in Hong Kong-in the black after just four years—and it had branched out to Manila and Kuala Lumpur, to Sydney and Melbourne, to Fiji and Auckland. Meanwhile, it had accumulated American Regents in Chicago, New York, Washington, D.C., and Albuquerque. Now the Regent group seems poised to enter the European market. Emboldened by the Dorchester sale, Regent is scouting even now in Germany and Switzerland. t would be charming to imagine that Adrian Zecha had Lcome this far from humble beginnings as a fisherman's son on the beaches of Bali. In fact, his family traces its rise to Zecha's great-great-grandfather, a Czech sculptor who fled to Holland after being involved in one of the periodic uprisings against the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and from there went to the East Indies.

By the time Adrian was born in 1933, the family had grown wealthy on its vast tea and rubber plantations. In 1948, when Adrian could qualify for a student visa, he followed his brothers to the U.S., quickly learning enough English to attend Dickinson College, where he got a premed degree. His father wanted Adrian to become a doctor, but he had other ideas. In 1953 he graduated from Columbia with a master's degree in political science. "I already knew that I wanted my own publishing business," recalls Zecha, "so I joined Time to get experience." After a brief stint as a journalist, he switched to the business side, eventually rising to be Asian operations manager before he left in 1960 to found Asia Magazine, a slick Sunday supplement designed to fit neatly inside the English-language newspapers of each Asian capital. Today Asia Magazine is an immense success (circulation: 370,000).

The traveling that Zecha did as he set up and ran his magazine stood him in good stead when two old friends asked him to join them at Regent. They made a formidable team: Burns and Rafael with their hotel experience gathered from posts all over Europe and beyond, and Zecha with his countless wealthy contacts in the region. Although Zecha is still involved with the Regent chain, he now spends most of his time on the company he formed four years ago in Hong Kong. Its three lines of business-China trading, oil field service and building vessels of all kinds for oil exploration and drilling-remain small and personal. "I really do not like to work in a corporate structure," savs Zecha. "My theory is that if you run a business with ten people, you are a psychiatrist with ten patients." So his main love and expertise remain the same. "All deal makers," he muses, "are solo players, and you have to be a lone wolf to survive. The penalty, by definition, is that you are sometimes a very lonely person."

the café au lait, served in a double-sized mug with a choice of four kinds of sugar, is a real treat. Breakfast at Le Régence offers light but not Spartan farea sensible strategy for diners who will probably do business at lunch and dinner as well. No eggs Benedict or lumberjack specials here, though the wafflescrisp outside, fluffy inside, with lashings of maple syrup on the side-and moist-but-not-greasy sausage are certainly a temptation to overindulgence.

Miraculously, the scrambled eggs come properly soft without even having to ask. Though we opted for York ham, more adventurous diners can have their eggs with Swiss dried beef, kippered herring or asparagus.

The ladies who lunch have already made Le Régence a regular part of their circuit. Jacqueline Onassis and Jihan Sadat have been seen in the restaurant, as have hotel guests like Prince Albert and Princess Caroline. At least for a little while, though, breakfast remains uncrowded and discreet. With its only noticeable flaw being tea served in bags rather than loose, and with Superagent Mort Janklow already a regular (he lives across the street), the question may soon be: Will success spoil Le Régence?

Le Regence, 37 East Sixty-fourth Street. Telephone: (212) 606-4648. All major credit cards accepted.

The Cafe Pierre is altogether a more hard-boiled experience. From seven o'clock on, the gray and gilt dining room of the Hotel masculine sound of deal makers at work. This is an international well, opening up the windows vainest CEO's need for flattering level, also make it easy to scan of porticos and other neoclassical objets d'art adorning the walls, the ambiance at the Cafe Pierre is exactly what Charles Pierre

Pierre is filled with the throaty, crowd: among the diners are bankers from Britain discussing the fate of Hong Kong merchant houses after the Chinese take over the colony. The ubiquitous Valerian Rybar has done his work along Sixty-first Street and filling the place with enough etched mirrors and sconces to satisfy the light. The mirrors, hung at eye the room without having to turn the head. But despite the plethora and in firm defiance of the trompe l'oeil sky dotting the walls and ceiling (a Rybar signature?), would have wished for the hotel he founded over 50 years ago. The well-upholstered diners astride well-upholstered chairs make the room seem like part of a very select private club.

If only the renovation had included polishing the service as well as the space. Perhaps the waiter's seeming neglect is intended to allow one time to study the Pierre's new "alternative" menu. Designed for calorie-counting and sodium-shunning diners. the alternative breakfast offers fruit and cereal with skim milk, bran-carrot muffins and decaffeinated coffee. "Our clientele are fairly conservative," says Restaurant Manager Peter Hinzmann. "They don't want wild innovations at breakfast." What they do want, presumably, is delicious food and properly prepared drinks. And that is exactly what they get.

The basket of pastries, all evidently baked on the premises, is impossible to resist. The croissants are flaky on the outside yet slightly moist inside, the brioches are excellent, and the bran muffins have at least as much flavor as fiber. As at Le Régence, tea is served in bags, but real tea is gladly brought on request. Unstrained fruit juices and sliced fresh fruit that, rarity of rarities, hasn't yet started to go soft or turn color make saving room for the main course a difficult but delicious duty. The scrambled eggs are soft, adorned with both strip and Canadian bacon, and the smoked Scotch salmon is succulent without being fleshy.

The gemütlich atmosphere, large tables and comfortable chairs all make getting down to //p. business easy. Judging from the body language and the prospectuses on the tables, a lot of work is being completed before many people even get out of bed. If Le Régence might also double nicely as a place to breakfast with an out-of-town lover and the Cafe Pierre as a place to meet a rich uncle from St. Louis, both are eminently enjoyable spots for making deals and breaking bread.

oloring Ways to Bring Dollar Down Softly

By LEONARD SILK New York Times Service

EW YORK - The French Prime Minister, Laurent Fabius, calls a "smooth decline" in the dollar crucial to his own country and the rest of Europe. The West German Finance Minister, Gerhard Stoltenberg, look-and Europe, warns that the debt problems of the develop-ntries would deteriorate rapidly if current levels of the and United States interest rates continue. And, in Wash-Treasury Secretary James A. Baker 3d says he wants "to ook" at ways of remodeling the world's currency markets, he is concerned about the overvalued dollar and the rly currency markets.

Dollar Is Firmer in Quiet Day

Gold, After Rise, Finishes Lower

The Associated Press NEW YORK - The dollar turned firmer in quiet trading Fri-day after four days of often-violent swings that lowered its value by 4.7

Gold prices fell, but still wound up the week with substantial gains. Republic National Bank in New York said bullion was bid at $316 a troy ounce as of 4 P.M. EST, off $1 from the late bid Thursday but up $21.50 from the end of the previous

Following a volatile week in which markets were buffeted by the closure of 70 savings and loans in Ohio and signs of unexpected weakness in the U.S. economy, currency traders who had been selling dollars bought some back Friday to reduce their exposure to new shocks over the weekend and to cash in on earlier gains, said Mory Ogata, senior vice president and treasurer of Union Bank in Los

"Some good profit-taking took place, especially against the pound in Europe," he added.

The pound, which ended last week in London at $1.0860, had shot up to $1.189 Thursday, but slipped to $1.1720 on Friday. Later in New York, the pound dipped further, to $1.1735 against $1.1875 Thursday.

"The main concern of the market is the total viability or health of the U.S. financial market or economy," Mr. Ogata said.

In Tokyo, where markets re-opened after a holiday Thursday, the dollar edged up to 254.90 Japa-nese yen from 254.10 Thursday in the United States. By the end of the trading day in New York, the dol. trading day in New York, the dol-lar had climbed to 255.45 yen.

SAN JOSE, California — Low-key and unabrasive, Bernard K. Tse does not fit the mold of the brash and flamboyant entrepreneurs who capture the headlines here. And his business — computer terminals — lacks the glamour of some high-tech fields such as microchips and biotechnology.

But his success is as dramatic as those of his Silicon Valley neighbors. Virtually overnight, Wyse Technology, a company founded by Mr. Tse and his wife, Grace, both Asian immigrants, has become the world's leading producer of computer terminals outside the major computer companies Sales for the fiscal year, which closes at the end of this month, are expected to exceed $75 million, quadruple the $18 million of the previous year, which in turn was quadruple the $4.3 million of the year before that.

pery pole." The technology is well understood, there is little brand loyalty and what counts most is low-cost manufacturing.

Indeed, Wyse quickly dethroned Televideo Systems Inc., a former Silicon Valley high-flier that is now facing hard times. Televideo, founded in the

The February increase in the consumer price index followed a 0.2-percent rise in January, the La-

It estimated that the broadly based implicit price deflator, which applies to consumers, businesses and wholesalers, is gaining at a rate of 5.4 percent this quarter. That rate would be nearly twice the rate in the fourth quarter. But when technical factors were considered, the underlying rate appeared to be less than 4 percent, about the same as charted by the consumer price index report Friday. Meanwhile, in a separate report, the Commerce Department said Friday that new factory orders for durable goods dropped 0.2 percent in February after an increase of 3.2 percent in January.

However, most of the decline was accounted for by a 48.5-percent drop in orders for defense capital goods, generally a volatile statistic. New orders for capital goods excluding defense, considered a gauge of future plant and equipment expenditures, increased 29.6 percent in February following a 13.1 percent decline the previous McGraw's stock surged $11 Friday buyouts. Japan's Exports Slowed by 6.3% In Latest Month

TOKYO - The Japanese economy is expanding steadily although exports, a major factor in recent economic growth, have slowed recently, the Economic Planning Agency said Friday in a monthly report.

By volume, customs cleared exports (ell 6.3 percent in February from January when they rose 3.4 percent, the report said. It attributed the decline to declines in shipments to the United States and to Southeast Asia.

Plant and equipment invest-ment in the fiscal year ending March 31 is estimated to have risen 7.5 percent from the previous year, and is forecast to rise 5.2 percent in the coming year.

The report said personal consumption has shown signs of moderate growth since January 1985 after earlier sluggishness. It said there are signs of recovery in housing starts and both consumer and wholesale prices are stable.

Economists who belittle the American dream are oblivious to the North American quest for achievement. In its relentless pursuit of ultimate excellence, the United States has been described as a daring experiment, one generation ahead of everybody else, the last word in modernity, the future that works, the next century. Even the inroads of Japan will not permanently fracture America's vision of fulfilment.

The convulsions of Vietnam set back, but did not negate, America's "rendezvous with destiny". Americans are emerging from the self-incriminating lyrics of the 1960's, students have abandoned the "gospel" according to Bob Dylan, and are studying again, trying to blend materialism with non-dogmatic morality.

We are not advocating a return to "Great Gatsby" class distinctions or the capitalism mocked by Sinclair Lewis, but rather an enlightened fiscalism, combining Yankee thrift with creative avariciousness.

Heeyun is a private company associated with the chairman of SHK, Fung King Hey. Mr. Fung, who owns a 28.8-percent stake in SHK, is obliged under the Hong Kong code on takeovers and mergers to make an unconditional general offer to acquire the remaining fully paid shares at 1.60 dollars each.

Ericsson Affiliate to Sell Gear to British Telecom

By Bob Hagerty
International Herald Tribune
LONDON — A local affiliate of Sweden's Telefon AB L.M. Ericsson has won a hotly contested or-der to supply digital local tele-phone exchanges to British Telecommunications PLC, the British telephone company said

But Britain's Office of Telecommunications said late Friday that it would investigate the planned purchase. The new regulatory agency cited complaints from members of Parliament who fear the purchase would reduce orders for purely British equipment.

The contract, valued at as much as £100 million (about $110 million), went to Thorn Ericsson Telecommunications Ltd., owned 49 percent by Ericsson and 51 percent by Thorn EMI PLC, a British electronics company. Thorn Ericsson's AXE exchange won over equip-ment offered by Northern Telecom

Last autumn, British Telecom had eliminated three other bidders: CIT Alcatel of France, Siemens AG of West Germany and Stan-dard Telephones & Cables PLC of Britain, which was offering ITT Corp.'s System 12 technology. The competition was strong partly because Britain is one of the few major industrial countries, apart from the United States, that buys exchange technology from foreign suppliers.

Most of Britain's digital exchanges are being supplied by Plessey Co. and General Electric Co. of Britain, both of which make System X exchanges. But British Tele-January sales, although just half of the red-hot December pace, were as a backup to System X. So far, System X has been troubled by technical delays and has failed to win major overseas orders.

The rise of the dollar during the negotiations had driven the cost of good transaction even at the higher price by the time it was delivered in the 1990s, that rise gave Britain second thoughts.

Britain's decision also reflected a spate of recent domestic natural gas discoveries in its own waters that made Sleipner look more expensive and less essential to meeting its natural gas needs in the early 1990s.

Finally, British policymakers ap-parently gave increasing weight as time passed to the argument that the extra supplies from Norway would simply be used by the stateowned gas company to steal indus-trial markets from the resource-rich nationalized coal industry, thus reducing Britain's long-term energy independence.

Given these circumstance, few
Norwegians believe that deferring Sleipner development is likely to affect the negotiations for which Norway is now preparing over the sale of 1.2 trillion cubic meters (42 n discontinued because the trillion cubic feet) of Troll natural couldn't be sold," said gas — six times the Sleipner total gas — six times the Sleipner total to a consortium of European utilities headed by Ruhrgas of West

Fortunately for Norway, the Sleipner rebuff came at time when it had numerous other development prospects in sight.

Prime Minister Kaare Willoch and government officials voiced their disappointment that the transaction had fallen through, as well as their annoyance that London had waffled for more than a year before making up its mind. But talk immediately turned to the "oil alternative."

"We began pressuring the oil community last year for alternative thinking," said Mr. Roedland.

just managing monetary growth will be enough to keep exchange account for more than 30 percent rates stable, prices steady and of Norway's exports and more than world economic growth continuing — monetarism has had no such ironclad results — to recognize the try remains small, but it is vital to desirability of cooperative action among the major central banks and the provision of greater guidance to the markets.

Central bank cooperation would certainly need the support of national governments. It would have to be accompanied, to the extent possible, by budget and fiscal poli-cies designed to reinforce nations' efforts to attain stable economic growth. It would also require trade policies and capital market policies aimed at furthering the develop-ment of both industrial and developing countries.

After college, Mr. Tse worked at RCA Laboratories on video displays and then for Zentec, a terminal maker. Mrs. Tse worked at RCA and then in the terminal division of Hewlett-Packard Co. When it came time to form a business, terminals were the obvious choice. Two other Zentec officials, Lawrence D. Lummis and Garwing Wn, were also involved in starting the company and are now vice presidents.

While many ter-minal companies buy terminals or subassemblies from the Far East, Wyse actually does its own manufacturing, and some of its own design, there. The vertical integration speeds up product design and lowers costs, officials say.

The company also introduced some sex appeal into an industry that was thought not to have any. Instead of the usual boxlike terminals, Wyse produced sleek ones with a V-shaped profile.

The company also got a break when Televideo made a disastrous

Mr. Tse said Wyse is close to landing some big new contracts. Sources say one of them, worth $10 million to $20 million, is with Northern Telecom Inc.

But Wyse's competition is mounting a counterattack in the main terminal area. This week, Te-AG facility in Cologne, the Scorpio levideo introduced a new terminal at roughly the same price, $700, as Wyse's main product, the WY-50, but with extra features. pex's lower price. Another uncertainty stems from the entry into the multi-user microcomputer market of IBM, with its PC-AT, and American Telephone & Telegraph Co., with its upcoming 7300. This might result in overall growth of the multi-user market, but could hurt Wyse's customers. It is not clear yet whether Wyse can get any of the terminal business for the IBM and AT&T machines.

Ford Motor Introduces New Sedan in Europe

United Press International DETROIT - Ford Motor Co. said Friday it has unveiled in Europe a four-door huxury sedan that could be imported to the United States by next spring. The car, the Scorpio, includes such features as anti-skid brakes, independent suspension and electronically controlled shock absorbers.

is designed to compete against such German cars as the BMW 528e and the Audi 5000, priced at $24,565 and $17,710 respectively. The rear-wheel-drive Scorpio will be sold for between $20,000 and $25,000, Ford

Building during that terrible Watergate summer of 1973. There, lodged in one of those big high-ceilinged rooms without anything pressing to do,

Israel David Goodkind, a 58-year-old corporate tax attorney, life-long Democrat, former gag writer, and now a neglected special assistant to the president —

yes, that president - starts writing his memoirs about growing up Jewish in America.

What Herman Wouk has tried to do, in the words of his hero, I. David Goodkind, is write "a kaddish in parts, and his very, very long novel — if you don't mind frequent helpings of sentimentality — is often fascinating, frequently funny and sometimes quite moving. I also suspect it of being a prescription written to cure "Portnoy's Complaint."

In one of his frequent ruminative passages, our hero, I. David Goodkind (with a long I), decided that "All American Jewish novelists are college between New York in the '20s and '30s and Washington in 1973. In the fall of that year, Goodkind's aged mother becomes ill in Israel. Watergate has also heated up again and the vice president is about to resign because of excessive greed. Goodkind flies off to Israel, finds his mother somewhat recovered and then goes calling on Golda Meir, whom he had escorted on U. S. fund-raising tours while he was counselor to the United Jewish Appeal.

It is here. I think, that Wouk's novel suffers from a mild case of Lanny Budd Blight, but he quickly cures it with only a minimum dose of melodrama and the Israelis, with a hand from Goodkind, go on to win their Yom Kippur War. There is also a gem of a scene between the disintegrating chief executive and Goodkind at Camp David. Wouk artfully catches the president's bewilderment and portrays him with understanding and compassion, if not Sympathy.

Flashing back to the '30s again, Goldhandler, the gag writer, dies and Goodkind returns to Columbia to take his law degree. His romance with the beantiful Bobbie Webb also dies, only to flicker into life again and then blaze up to a point where he asks this complete Outsider to marry him.

As for the '30s, Wouk has succeeded in writing it a torch song, if of a distinctly Manhattan variety. He is even more successful at the kaddish that is said for the father of I. David Goodkind.

As for Goodkind himself, he changes over the years. Never a true hedonist or unbeliever, he grows a lot more devout, a little stuffier, somewhat more rous, and a trifle complacent. In other words, he grows both up and older and, as he does, he remembers. And I must add that he remembers wonderfully well.

United Press International DALLAS - If the NCAA tour-

Wayman Tisdale and Andre Turner, two very likely heroes, put Oklahoma and Memphis State into the final with last-second shots in their games Thursday night. Tisdale provided the game-wi ner for the Sooners in an 86-84 overtime victory over Louisiana Tech, and Turner did the same for the Tigers just as regulation ended in a 59-57 thriller against Boston

In the East Regional at Providence, Rhode Island, Georgetown defeated Loyola of Illinois, 65-53, and Georgia Tech beat Illinois, 61-53. The Hoyas and Yellow Jackets meet Saturday in the East final. Tisdale sank a six-foot (one-me ter) jump shot with three seconds ng in overtime to bring Oklahoma its victory.

"A lot of guys didn't have the point total they want, so they want to play five more minutes. I think Wayman was one of those. He vanted a few more shots," said the Sooners' coach, Billy Tubbs.
Tisdale, a 6-foot-9 junior who played the final nine minutes with four fouls, scored eight of his 23 points in overtime. Louisiana Tech overcame a fourpoint deficit in overtime to tie the score with 18 seconds left on two free throws by Robert Godbolt. Oklahoma worked for the final shot, with Louisiana Tech trying its best to deny Tisdale the ball.

With the score tied at 57, the Eagles held the ball for the final two minutes and called time out with 14 seconds remaining to play. However, Vincent Askew stole the ball from Roger McCready after seconds left, and fed Turner. Turner moved left before beating the buzzer with his winning shot.

"That last situation was just one of those things," said Boston Col-lege's coach, Gary Williams. "We lost the ball, but it still took a great shot to beat us."

Two free throws by McCready with 4:37 left made it 57-57. The contest's next points came on Turner's game-winning shot.

Ewing said.

Andre Moore had 19 points for Loyola. Alfredrick Hughes, averag-ing 27 a game and a double-figure scorer for 94 straight games, was held to eight points on four-of-13

"It was a great season," Moore said. "It's too bad it had to end losing.

Hughes, a senior forward, picked up three personal fouls early in the first half and sat out the last 10:02. Yet, the Ramblers gave the Hoyas trouble and led at halftime, 28-26. Georgetown, the Big East Conference tournament champion, still trailed, 38-36, early in the second half as Hughes found the range for two baskets. But Georgetown went on a 8-0 run, with Ewing contribut-ing six points, and held a 44-38 idvantage with 15:17 to play. Georgetown then held Loyola at bay as Ewing continued to be a force on the inside and the Hoyas spread spread out their offense.

Wintering on Lake Warms Young Man's Heart

MILWAUKEE - For seven long weeks, Tom Nutt spent his mornings and evenings contemplating the shimmering lights of the distant Lake Superior shore, the biting wind and a hole in the ice.

Nutt lived in a six-foot (183 centimeters) by eight-foot ice fishing shack, 21/2 miles (four kilometers) from land. It started as a publicity stunt to promote off-season recreation in turned into something special, something personal, for the 26-year-old.
